judith butler and conservative christian theology are often perceived to be antithetical on questions of gender in reforming a theology of gender they are shown to be strange bedfellows by engaging in dialogue with butler on her terms desire violence and life this book absorbs the heart of butler s critique revealing a righteous law and a seductive image in conservative theologies of gender the law of adam and eve manifests in the unjust administration of guilt grief and death by confronting this law which in fact condemns all in their bodies further reflection on butler s thought leads to thinking about where one finds life in one s body of death the seductive image of adam and eve is revealed to be a false hope and a site that induces slave morality or body works based righteousness butler s voice is strangely prophetic because it calls the church to offer hope and life by reorienting its gaze from the beautiful yet lifeless bodies of adam and eve to the bloodied and scarred risen body of jesus christ gender in the end is shown to be a vocation of becoming what one is not how did literary artists confront the middle of a century already defined by two global wars and newly faced with a nuclear future midcentury suspension argues that a sense of suspension a feeling of being between beginnings and endings recent horrors and opaque horizons shaped transatlantic literary forms and cultural expression in this singular moment rooted in extensive archival research in literary print and public cultures of the anglophone north atlantic claire seiler s account of midcentury suspension ranges across key works of the late 1940s and early 1950s by authors such as w h auden samuel beckett elizabeth bishop elizabeth bowen ralph ellison and frank o hara seiler reveals how these writers cultivated modes of suspension that spoke to the felt texture of life at midcentury running counter to the tendency to frame midcentury literature in the terms of modernism or of our contemporary midcentury suspension reorients twentieth century literary study around the epoch s fraught middle american poetic voice in the era of global broadcast mass vernacular examines american poetic voice at a moment when technology was changing the sound of language itself situating the poetry of marianne moore w h auden frank o hara and adrienne rich in a broad institutional and technological soundscape it reveals how poetry intersects with both specific sound technologies like the phonograph the radio the telephone and the tape recorder and a variety of vocal practices and institutions including elocution instruction live poetry readings and radio based forms of cultural diplomacy routing their poetry through modern circuits of communication it argues that twentieth century poets created a paradoxically intimate and global mass vernacular as they envisioned lyric voices circulating in ways similar to other official and mass voices in this context the formal poetic elements that we often associate with the lyric not just voice but also tone address apostrophe and prosopopoeia in fact reveal a complex history of american cultural consolidation and global distribution ultimately the book restores the sound of american poetic voice to its larger acoustical range enmeshed in the range of social institutions that simultaneously came to underwrite the nation's global power more generally provided by publisher
